WINS FIRST PRIZE

Fair Women Watch Their Heroes Struggle With Lances.

From the green clad hills of Maryland and Virginia where the memories of the chivalric age are kept fresh in mind, came sixteen knights errant to River View yesterday, there to enter the lists and fight for honor and lady fair. Not in mortal compat as in older days, but in mortal combat as in olden days, but by their skill in tilting; by their accu racy in gathering the rings on the point of the lance did the knightly horsemer struggle for honors.

Unlike the knights of old, they entered the lists unplumed and without armor. No shields guarded their sides as they dashed at the rings, but their success, or at least that of four of the knights was as great as ever befell the warriors of King Arthur. And the shrill notes of the trumpeter that greeted the successful knights were accentuated by the hand clapping and blushes of his lady fair.

Thousands Witness the Sport.

To the call of the trumpet, shortly after 1 o'clock, came the knights to the jousts accompanied by the several thou-sand Marylanders, Virginians and residents of the District who had gathered in the park for the twenty-first annual tournament. Previous to the start of the tournament, J. Enos Ray, of Maryland, assured the knights that the chivalry of King Arthur and his followers still lived in the hearts of Southern people, and was as manifest today as in the ages past. Tilting began with the knights dashing to the rings as their names

Sir Maryland was the first to try the rings, and his success in making a per-fect score, the first try, caused other knights less nervy to lose their con-fidence and the chance of crowning their loved one. . After each contestant had ridden down the course three times, Si Munson Hill, Knights Washington Boy Maryland, Georgetown, and Sir Anheuser Busch were tied for first place. On the run-off, the knight with the modern, unthe others in the order named.

Contenders and Titles.

The contenders and their titles were Lawrence Seibel, St. Joseph; Theodore Gates, River View; James Downs, Virginia; S. Benson, Arlington; R. B. Kirby, Langley; W. L. Clark, Virginia Boy; H. D. Hirst, Ingleside; E. N. James, Jolly Six; Basil Blandford, Acokeep; J. H. Blandford, District of Columbia; Harry Palmer, Georgetown Boy; T. Head, Munson Hill; A. De Sales Lang-ley, Washington Boy; L. D. Love, Maryland; E. M. Palmer, Georgetown, and J. A. Harron, Anheuser Busch.

At 8 o'clock, as the coronation of the Queen of Love and Beauty, and her maids took place, W. B. Hunter urged the annual tournament be continued. J. A. Harron placed the crown of lilies-of-the-valley on Miss Dora Dixon, of Friendship, Md. Honor wreaths were bestowed on Miss Edith Row, of Falls Church, Va., by Thomas Head; Miss Linnie Rock, of Washington, by A. Des Sales Langley, while Miss E. B. Harrison, of Washington, was honored by E. M. Palmer.

Distribution of Prizes.

Following the coronation dance by the winning knights and ladies, the prize money was distributed to the victoriou knights, being divided respectively into $27, $21, $16, $10, and $5. General dancing ounded out the day's pleasure. tournament was voted a success from every standpoint by the crowd that gathered on the last steamer, and no small measure of the pleasure enjoyed was due to the efforts of J. M. Kendrick, of the Washington and Potomac Steamboat Company, under whose jurisdiction the tournament was run.

The committee that arranged for the tournament, and made the day one of pleasure was: Chief marshal, George W. Hardy; aides, Millard Thom, Archie Ware, Ralph Parker; timekeeper, Andy Beyer; judges, T. B. Middleton, J. Henry Murray, J. Steed Edelen, Dr. Harry Nally, J. A. Carrico; orator of the day, J. Enos Ray; orator of the evening, W. Brook Hunter; committee of arrangements, J. M. Kendrick, Stephen Gardella; committee on knights, Charles Middleton, Roger I. Manning.

LOW SATURDAY FARES FOR RIVER VIEW TRIPS

Parents are invited to give all the little folks an outing at River View on Satur-day next when the low fare trips will be made at 10 a, m. and 2:15 p. m. by the steamer Harry Randall. The little folks will find plenty to amuse them at the resort and in the cool shade of the big trees they can run about and play to their heart's content. If they wish to shout and yell as they play, exercising the lungs is good for them, and no one will stop them. The merry-go-round, and all the other attractions of the reand all the other attractions of the resort will be ready to amuse the little ones and there will be muste and dancing all day. On the evening trip the steamer will make a special run to Indian Head after stopping at River View, and those who go to the View during the day can enjoy the trip down the river and home again without extra cost. The usual Sunday trips will be made to River View next Sunday with the run down to Indian Head in the evening.
